February 2010 – Raymarine ambassador, Shelley Jory, and co-pilot Audrienne Ciantar have become the first all-woman team to win a Powerboat P1 grand prix.

Shelley thanked Raymarine for helping the racers win the Turkish Grand Prix in the Powerboat P1 World Championships – by keeping them under the speed limit.

Fitting a Raymarine ST70 as a repeater in her P1 powerboat helped Team Raymarine keep under the Super Sport 85 mph speed limit in the Turkish Grand Prix and not incur penalties, as they did on a previous event.

Shelley explains, “The speed limit is rigorously observed by the judges for our safety. Going over 85 miles per hour in an open canopy can be dangerous, but the engines can do it. It’s not easy to be as fast as possible when racing, yet stay under the speed limit. For every ten seconds we are over, we incur a one minute penalty,”

The pair had been penalised in their first Grand Prix Super Sport event in Malta, and the five minute deduction pushed them to fourth overall.

Shelley knew that it was vital to have highly accurate real time speed timing, especially in Istanbul as the Bosphorus waterway, where the racing took place, has eight knot tides, which would either slow the boat down or risk taking them over the speed limit.

In August 2009, Shelley joined Sir Robin Knox-Johnston in the challenging Cowes-Torquay-Cowes powerboat marathon – and won three trophies between them.

The pair finished fourth overall, completing the world's greatest offshore powerboat race in their Team Scorpion Sting RIB in just over four hours – an incredible achievement in extremely challenging weather conditions and the fact that it was Sir Robin's first powerboat race!

They won first in their class, Shelley won the Ladies Trophy and Sir Robin, at 70 years old, also received the MEMA Trophy for the oldest competitor.

Raymarine also supported Team Seawolf RIB racers Major Greg Marsden and Justin McInerney in the race.

The end of the year saw Shelley Jory swapping race overalls for a magnificent silk wedding dress when she married marine race engineer, Trevor Leigh, at Wimborne Minster, Dorset, in the UK.

Shelley – now Mrs Jory-Leigh – was in the ideal position to choose her dream platinum silver dress and coat ensemble, made by top designer Justin Alexander from 45 yards of Dupion silk and featuring 3,000 Swarovski crystals, as she manages the family business, Brides of Southampton.
